

Name: Jesús Antonio de Inés Serrano

CV: Jesús A. de Inés Serrano did his Degree in History (2009-2013) and his Master (2013-2014) at the University of Cantabria. He is now coursing his PhD as predoctoral researcher thanks to an aid from the University and the Government of Cantabria. He held several communications in Nájera (2014), Lleida (2015), Madrid (2016), Cáceres (2016), Bielle (2017) and Belfast (2018), some of them published in prestigious editorials such as Cambridge University Press (2018). Besides, in the last three years, he has been teaching Middle Ages to students from Spain (Degree and Senior students) and from USA (North Carolina) at the University of Cantabria, under Prof. Dr. Jesús Ángel Solórzano Telechea's supervision. Finally, in 2018, he has recently stayed at Trinity College of Dublin under Prof. Dr. David Ditchburn's supervision, at KU Leuven under Prof. Jelle Haemers' and at CIDEHUS Évora under Prof. Hermínia Vasconcelos Vilar's.

PhD program: Geography and History, University of Cantabria

PhD supervisor: Prof. Dr. Jesús Ángel Solórzano Telechea

PhD research title: "Relaciones de poder, cultura política y contestación social en las comunidades del Cantábrico en la Baja Edad Media".

PhD research summary: This project is focused on three main points in a particular context; namely social-political relationships between the Castilian monarchy, nobility, the Church and rural communities; conflicts for power and political culture in Asturias de Santillana, from 1369 to 1450, by studying various sorts of judicial documents, specially trials, petitions and royal commands.